"Obviously, I would have liked to do better than sixth place, but in view of our pace, that's probably about right. I lost the DRS to the guys in front quite near the start. I was just fighting the whole race after that, trying to draw away from the other drivers. We weren't quick enough to win today, but sixth place means more points. It's tough to score points every weekend. Hopefully, we can get back on the podium next race."
